MORNING BRIEF

9/30/2020

The end-of-month rebound in global equities faded as investors weighed prospects for fiscal stimulus in the U.S. and the outlook for the coronavirus pandemic. Oil tumbled on concern slow growth will limit demand.

The S&P 500 Index slumped, with more than two stocks falling for every one that advanced, after talks on expanding aid ended for the day with plans to resume discussions tomorrow. An exchange-traded fund that tracks the S&P 500 gained 0.2% in after-hours trading after a study showed a Regeneron Pharmaceuticals Inc. antibody cocktail may help treat coronavirus patients outside of the hospital.

Asia stocks were set for a mixed start as traders awaited data from China for the latest information on the strength of the recovery in the region's largest economy.

According to the General Statistics Office, GDP in the first nine months of 2020 will increase by 2.12% (it will increase by 3.68% in the first quarter; 0.39% in the second quarter; and 2.62% in the third quarter), which is the lowest growth rate in the period 2011-2020. However, this growth can be said to be still positive compared to the average level of countries in the world.

Foreign investors net sold more than 638 billion dong. On HOSE, net selling focused on VNM, VHM, VIC, GAS. On the HNX, focusing on net selling on DXP and VCS. Market liquidity was at a high level, total market trading value reached more than 10,000 billion. At the end of the session, the VN-Index dropped by more than 8.5% to 904 points, the HNX-Index dropped nearly 1.4 points to 131.74 points.
